Dear [Redacted]

STAT

That was a strange performance in your reporting of the statement I made in response to Senator Hart's citing as improper my not placing my securities in a blind trust. I pointed out that Senator Hart had sat in the Senate when the mandatory blind trust was rejected and disclosure established instead as the appropriate method to protect the public interest when officials sell or buy property.

The purpose of my brief statement was to call attention to the fact that Hart was there when the rules were established and now cries foul at transactions which were contemplated at the time and which were handled in every respect in conformity with those rules. The story in your January 30 issue managed to entirely omit this central point, while reiterating Hart's politically motivated charges. It is hard to attribute this handling of my explicit statement to accident or incompetence.

Sincerely,

William J. Casey
